

educational considerations

Vol. XVI, Number 2, Spring 1989

Table of Contents—Spring 1989

Comments from the Guest Editor	2
by Anita M. Pankake, Kansas State University, Manhattan, Kansas
The LEAD (Leadership in Educational Administration Development) Program: An Overview	3
by Hunter Moorman, Office of Educational Research and Improvement, Washington, D.C.
Historical and Conceptual Underpinnings of Leadership Development Programs: A Quest for Roots	8
by Kent Peterson, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wisconsin, and Fran Wills, Belfast, Maine
The Development and Implementation of LEAD
The History of a Legislative Proposal	11
by Edward J. Larson, University of Georgia, Athens, Georgia
A Professional Association's View of the Development of LEAD	14
by Bruce Hunter, American Association of School Administrators, Arlington, Virginia
Implementation of LEAD—Part I: Legislative Analysis and Regulations Development	16
by Hunter Moorman, Office of Educational Research and Improvement, Washington, D.C.
Implementation of LEAD—Part II: Grants Competition and Program Operation	20
by Hunter Moorman, Office of Educational Research and Improvement, Washington, D.C.
Administrator Surveys as Alternative Policy Instruments	23
by Clifford B. Janey, Boston Public School, Roslindale, Massachusetts; Karl H. Clauset, Jr., Educational Development Center, Newton, Massachusetts; and Suzanne LaCombe, Boston, Massachusetts
New Curriculum and Training Techniques
Preparing Principals: New Directions	26
by F. Del Wasden, Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah, and Gloria Jean Thomas, University of North Dakota, Grand Forks, North Dakota Administrator Development: A Step Beyond Training	30
by John R. Hoyle, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas Program Approaches to Administrative Training and Development
Statewide Collaboration in Alabama	36
by John S. Martin, Auburn University, Auburn University, Alabama
Educational Leadership Development and the Implementation of Innovative Schooling Practices	39
by Margaret C. Wang, Richard M. Englert, and JoAnn B. Manning, Temple University Center for Research in Human Development and Education, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania
The Development of an Instrument for Client Based Principal Evaluation	45
by Howard Ebmeier, University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kansas, and Alfred Wilson, Kansas State University, Manhattan, Kansas
The Select Seminar Process: A Program That Works	50
by Nelson Armlin, Richard Bamberger, and Richard McDonald, Capital Area School Development Association-LEAD Center, Albany, New York
Statewide Programs for Administrator Training and Development: The Oregon Leadership Academy for School Administrators	52
by Kate Dickson, Confederation of Oregon School Administrators, Salem, Oregon
Influencing Higher Education Through Field-Based Opportunities in TN LEAD	54
by Ernest L. Bentley and W. Hal Knight, East Tennessee State University, Johnson City, Tennessee Special Program Focuses
The Role of Project LEAD in Increasing the Numbers of Minority and Female Educational Administrators	56
by Naida Tushnet Bagenstos, Southeastern Educational Improvement Laboratory, Research Triangle Park, North Carolina
School/Business Collaboration with Implications for School Administrators	59
by Jan Carlsson-Bull, The Partnership for New Jersey, New Brunswick, New Jersey
Developing Instructional Leadership: The Challenge of State-Wide Leadership Academies	62
by Laraine Roberts, California School Leadership Academy, Hayward, California
The National LEADership Network	67
by Elizabeth L. Hale, Institute for Educational Leadership, Washington, D.C.
The LEAD Program at Age 2: Accomplishments and Future Directions	70
by Hunter Moorman, Office of Education Research and Improvement, Washington, D.C.	