Publish on Demand Process

The editors of the Journal of Applied Communications (JAC) have worked to improve processes for the journal, and this issue represents the first time we have used the new publish-on-demand process. We believe this change is an improved process and are adjusting our procedure manuals for this to be how the journal works in future issues.

A Thank You to Our Reviewers

This issue also represents the first time we have highlighted those who were reviewers for JAC. The publication of JAC would be impossible without the dedicated service of our reviewers. We wish we could give them even more credit for their hours spent reviewing, but we are happy to have this small start in the direction of recognition for their service to the profession. In future issues, we will recognize reviewers for their service in the same way.
